Dear Dan:

We had hoped by now to have reached a mutually acceptable resolution with respect to your past due payments on your account. As you are aware, these costs were incurred in representing you in the above-mentioned applications. Your account balance now stands at $1,932.34 and no payment has been received.

Since no agreement regarding payment has been reached, we have decided to withdraw from representing you and incurring additional fees and costs in connection with your pending patent application.

Since this application was filed after June 7, 1995, the life of any patent issued on it will expire at a date that begins to run from the filing date, rather than the issue date, as in the past. However, the patent will not become effective until it is issued, and thus, if the application is not prosecuted promptly to issuance, the effective life of the patent will be shortened.

We regret that this matter has to be resolved in this manner. Please call if you have any questions.

Sincerely,
